CLINTON, N. Y., July 18, 1868.

The Fifty-fourth annual commencement of Hamilton College is now an established fact. The week has been one of unusual interest and pleasure to the students. Many of the alumni who for eight years has constantly and ably filled the professorships of the college has entered on his duties and his farewell to the duties and the manner in which he has discharged the duties of a new theory have been laid. These two events, in addition to the most attractions of the week have served to draw a great many visitors to this quiet village.

On Sunday, July 12th, the usual Baccalaureate sermon was delivered before the graduating class by President Fisher. Not until Monday, however, did the multitude gather. The baccalaureate address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Hall, of Brooklyn, and was listened to with the greatest attention by the students. Young men accustomed to their feet visibly were the centre of attraction, and it was noticed that the others looked with envy upon their more favored fellows. Dr. Hall's address was a most able one, and was listened to by a large audience. Four hundred copies of the oration of the week in which the graduates in his old college.

Among evening by young men scattered the hillsides and dales of this beautiful village, and it was announced that the prizes were carried by their competitors. The list of general men as follows:

Classical—First prize, Lyon G. Tyler, Virginia; second prize, Henry A. Stevens, Virginia.

Philosophical—First prize, David B. Steele, Pennsylvania; second prize, Edward Hungerford, Utica, N. Y.

Tuesday was "class day"—the saddest day of all the year for those who participated in it. They gather to say farewell. The class of '68 has passed through the ordinary trials of college life with more than ordinary success. Its members are united. For thinking they claim that as President they never yielded to the temptation to "cut" recitations. Their recitations, but were ever victorious in the repeated rushes, rows and divers other combats with the sophomores. The class of '68 has their intercourse with the faculty as pleasant as unusual, and it will be remembered, and so secretly executed, that not two of their number have been requested to leave college. Their motto, "Semper Idem" (ever good), "the" class day" exercises consisted of a fine oration, by A. S. Campbell of Indiana; Poem, by George Bliss, Jr., of Sangerfield, New York; an interesting history of the class by W. J. Townsend, of Brooklyn, New York; a [illegible] by Charles Hamlin, of Maine; and a prophecy by H. Smith of Clarkville, New York; and a farewell address by Edward Hungerford, of the whole class to the college.

On the evening of the college men in the beautiful "campus" to witness the laying of the corner-stone of the new Chapel. The Rev. Dr. Smith, Literary Hall, after Forty H. Smith, of Oxford, who is first student who has been in the college for forty years. Many years ago Mr. Smith was a student of the college, and it was a pleasant sight to see the old gentleman and the young men side by side. It is intended that Mr. Smith has given $12,000 of this amount, I am told, while the other has been contributed by other alumni of Hamilton College, in the West. The ample statement of Mr. Smith's liberality is another proof to the Hamilton College that the graduates of the institution that every one interested in educational institutions must look to its own gifts. Gerrit Smith, who is now in his seventy-seventh year, is one of the most distinguished men of the class or country. On Wednesday morning was the "junior exhibition" of the Theological Seminary, which is located in this village. The [illegible] of Prof. A. J. Upson, D. D., was delivered by Rev. Dr. Shedd, of New York. On Wednesday evening was the "junior exhibition" of the undergraduates of the college. The [illegible] of Prof. A. J. Upson, D. D., was delivered by Rev. Dr. Shedd, of New York. On Wednesday evening was the "junior exhibition" of the undergraduates of the college. The [illegible] of Prof. A. J. Upson, D. D., was delivered by Rev. Dr. Shedd, of New York.

At 10½ o'clock a. m. the procession was formed at College Chapel, and took its way to the Presbyterian Church on the other side of the village, where a [illegible] for the occasion. After the [illegible] prayer by Rev. Dr. Shedd, Prof. [illegible] delivered the salutatory address in Latin. Mr. [illegible] followed with a poem, which was received with [illegible] applause. Mr. [illegible] followed with a valedictory address, which was received with [illegible] applause. Mr. [illegible] followed with a valedictory address, which was received with [illegible] applause.
